This is not an ordinary event.

The OECD is an organization that forms standards for states in the field of financial transparency, sanctions policy, anti—corruption and international compliance. This is where the principles of regulators, banks, financial monitoring mechanisms, and transnational law enforcement are discussed.

The Forum on Anti—Corruption and Integrity is a platform where representatives of governments and ministries of justice of OECD countries gather.;

- International regulators and financial supervisors;
- experts from the sanctions and FATF circuits;
- financial intelligence specialists;
- Compliance directors of major international banks and corporations;
- independent analytical centers.
